History of The Noah's Ark Inn's open air productions

The Pantiles Players were founded in 1942 with the purpose of providing local wartime entertainment. Between then and now, they have presented 164 productions at various venues, mainly in Tunbridge Wells. In 2010, The Players transferred all their productions to Salomons in Southborough Kent. Salomons is a beautiful historic house set in 36 acres of gardens and grounds. Since 1988, the Players have toured their summer open-air shows to "The Noah's Ark Inn" with considerable success. The Pantiles Players amalgamated with The Rotherfield Players early in 2017 and now perform under their name.

About the play

The Country Wife is a Restoration Comedy written in 1675 by William Wycherley. Even at that time, it was controversial for its sexual explicitness. The play involves three plots: a rake's trick of pretending impotent, thus allowing him to have clandestine affairs with married women; the arrival in London of an inexperienced young "country wife" who then discovers the "joys" of town life; then there is a courtship love triangle showing the good-natured side of society.
